

JJ Kavanagh puts WiFi on buses

Dublin: Coach Company JJ Kavanagh & Sons is the first in Ireland to bring the information age to their passengers with the introduction of onboard WiFi to their fleet of Fáilte Ireland approved coaches.

The introduction of the WiFi service has resulted from the growing need of business commuters to be accessible and connected at all times as well as increased consumer internet usage. Students want to access to social entertainment such as Bebo and Facebook and all other passengers now have the option of logging on line for their specific needs throughout their journey.

JJ Kavanagh & Sons has partnered with Fleet Connect Ltd who has fitted coaches with 3G broadband-enabled MoovBox M series wireless technology which has been initially rolled out on five coaches. The latest in vehicle technology will allow JJ Kavanagh & Sons to track the location of each vehicle in its fleet in real-time leading to improve service for its customers along with high speed wireless internet access for all passengers.

Launching the service, director Paul Kavanagh said: "It's an exciting time for the company providing internet connectivity to our entire fleet introduces a technology platform on which we can build new and innovative services that not only benefit our passengers but also improve the way our fleet operates."
