

Coach firm launches onboard wi-fi

COACH journeys offer more than the chance to gape at fellow passengers now that J Kavanagh & Sons has introduced onboard wi-fi to their fleet. The move resulted from the growing need of business commuters to be connected to the internet during their journeys. And the firm, which operates scheduled services from Dublin Airport, recognised that students also want to access social networking sites such as Bebo and Facebook while travelling. The service, the first of its kind on Irish coaches, has been initially rolled out on five coaches. The company said the introduction of wi-fi will benefit its passengers while improving the way its fleet operates.
